

Poetryosophy

Poetry and Philosophy for your heart and soul

“Oneness”

Oneness is the essence of everything; it is everything.

By Chris Peters

A Prologue

There is a Oneness to each One that is obsessive and the very essence. There is and will only be one you, and for the billions that have lived, now live, and will ever live, the hand of life granted to all is truly special and noteworthy. The Oneness of One shows itself in the essence each person brings to the whole. You are One whole person bringing everything that is uniquely you, as that seed from which comes a forest. Likewise, what's inside of you eagerly awaits only for the right environment in life to germinate and bear change to a world. At the same time as all, the gift of choice, to will, to choose, make decisions is given as a reminder of our precious and common Oneness.

WHAT'S NEW

TAKING A CLOSER LOOK AT YOU

Our newsletter will focus on you the individual and the important link that you are in the chain of human history as a whole

ENGAGING TOPIC

You will on closer notice and reading see yourself reflected in what is written

BE BOLD, CHOOSE

It is the hope that by reading the information presented, will stimulate your interest to want more

A Body

We are more One, more similar, have more in common, than we would care to admit. In our conception was a period where we could've been either male or female, female or male. We were One in our holding place or residence. A closer look at our anatomy, shows our bodies complement each other, and for this, they willingly testify that we came from "ONE". We were residents in "ONE" before "One" came from which all came. (1Corinthians 15:22) We will come back to this later. This ocean that is each of us, as that of the earth, is still a vast, complex and uncharted territory that holds approximately the same percentage of water, (60-75% given other factors). As the greater earth where we were fashioned and born into, comprising more water and less land, we too as miniature earths, are composed of the same (dust to dust, ashes to ashes?). It should come as no surprise, as together we live here and only here, our bodies will constantly need replenishing. All nations are made of one blood that flows through veins and sustains life, and though varies in type, will always be red when it presents itself to us, in need of it, for life is in the blood. Our Oneness is a sure thing, and we ought to look on each as part of the whole. There is still so much that we don't know, and that the human brain in its current state can only accommodate.

Truth be told we are no good without each other, naked we came and for sure naked we will leave to return, we will take only a character, and yet society and the powers that be, tell us to separate ourselves, to caste ourselves into classism, create institutions that divide us, set up schisms that look down on another as less than, treat the fairer amongst us as property, set up walls of separation. This, while very intentional to advantage some, by its very nature is designed for suppression of the masses. The earth's very influential and powerful few, have made it their studied attempt from antiquity, to divide the masses of humanity, to conquer them. It has always been about power and control. They have studied that because on this Oneness, humanity can be corralled and kept in holding places you want for them. The shadows we cast as humans traversing between our passing rays of light, and the finite surfaces of our earthly existence, are seen in the failing arms of flesh, which we dare not trust. In our Oneness we expose ourselves to nepotism and cronyism, and for such whose end is financial gain, here comes political institutions. "The hypocrisy of politics is that most politicians only work for the people, when they are working with them to get themselves elected. After that it is all man for themselves. Once elected, they do anything and everything in their power to maintain their position, until the next time they need to work with the people to get themselves re-elected, and it repeats"¹. The converse of our Oneness when fostered and not exploited is for our gain, a better planet, and a fulfill, purposeful life.

Thus, the few, became more powerful, as they took charge of earth's majority, and amassed wealth at their poverty and demise. When walls were erected, cities built, men appointed, anointed kings, and lords, this old wealth passed down throughout history by conquest, inheritance, feudalism, is still here with us today alongside new money. Having knowledge of this Oneness of all humanity, rather than bring us together to enjoy the wealth and bounty this earth freely offers, for it has enough for all, if only we are willing to share. Human beings have been manipulated, used and abused by fellow human beings. We are more of Oneness than we care to imagine, evident in how we came, dominant traits that mark us as human beings. How we can be programmed to behave in certain ways to believe what's in our heads, told to us repeatedly as the truth, even though it may have no bearing on what truth is.

The truth is that had we stayed together, supported each other, the one that strayed to its near destruction, would've stayed and lived safely in the fold, and not caused another to come looking after it, at the peril of His life.

We live on one planet, it's conducive for life, that's why we were made for it, and it hugs and houses us in every way. Escaping to live on any other that we can see is inhospitable at best and delusional at worst. If we destroy earth, we are literally destroying ourselves, leaving nothing for our progeny. We breathed the same air, eat basically the same food, react to the environment in similar ways, and adapt likewise to it. We need to eat, sleep or we die a slow death. Our bodies perform similar functions, and being the same in many respects, will slowly age and given time, prepares for death and the grave. Our Oneness in existence in time is predetermined by just being born into it. We will only live one life here on this blue ball and die one death. To love like grief is common to all, and while we cannot touch them, they touch us, and we feel their effects. One needs the other to exist in our spaces, for to never know grief is to have never loved. In exposing ourselves to love as is our Oneness, grief will be the byproduct of the same. Our destiny is sure as the gift of choice that all have been given to perform. The common ability to think for oneself is also given and should be jealously guarded, for many are the attempts to alter that thinking process to another's gain. We desire appreciation, seen for who we truly are, listened to, belonging, and acceptance, as evident in the bully on the playground, the hurting person, the loveless one, will hurt others because they hurt, crying out.

When we think we are so different, we are more of the same, our vision while we strive for twenty, twenty, still is defective and the imagination to thoroughly plan with imagination and wisdom is thwarted. Simply because our retina detects light to convert it so that the optic nerve can help take it to the brain to interpret it, is inefficient at best. What we can't see are more than what we can, and greater are their impact on our existence among their presence. In our coming forth we knew only the darkness of our gestation where our eyes were shut, waiting for entry into the light to be opened. Then to be touched to know we are precious and of value to onlooking eyes. Would that we can see beyond to the colors that other creatures behold, to be totally amazed, to change our perspectives on life. We silently seek out another's company in our Oneness for the fulfilment and comfort it brings. We are no good locked us away into the inner most prison (solitary confinement), no sooner insanity will step in. We were not made to be separated from one another, but to come into fellowship, break bread, and be happy with all. How difficult a thing it will be to separate one grain of sand from the seashore. Is it any wonder that social media is now a worldwide craze, as everyone and anyone who can create a channel, a blog, a page on their daily activity for all the world to see will do so. Now called influencers, working for the powerful few, who again amassed their wealth at the expense of the majority. They know how to dangle that which looks delightful and titillating for a few pennies, while they become more powerful as they marionette the world. We will feed at their troughs and falsely feel a sense of satisfaction, while never truly contented and fulfilled. Humanity is not very difficult to manipulate, for that systems have been put into place. The painful truth is that human beings can be easily led.

We are literally killing ourselves for what is already ours, and once taught to remain in our places and spaces, to look on another as different, on account of skin pigment, hair texture, and other physical features, we stay divided. It is for us to know that at our core we are all One, desiring the same intangibles. Seeing what the human heart is capable of, and its intentions, it is for our consideration to see in each other, beauty and Oneness despite what may appear to look so different, it's only variety. Again, our vision is very defective, more than we can imagine, and cannot be trusted. We must be intentional to love our differences and embrace it, as purposeful to our Oneness. We must remind ourselves, that no person who have ever lived, was asked before they came, what kind of body they would like to be presented in, what side of the planet they would like to live on, the home and parents they would like to be born into and raised in, the social status and family they would like to open their eyes to, and be privileged to be a part of, the life pool of luxury they will like to be swimming in. We had no choice in the many things of this life, including a body that's dying momentarily. Yet we find fulfillment, power by dividing and conquering. Earlier we looked at how we all came out of "One". That "One's" very first act was to worship, an inbuilt desire stronger than all, more than our necessary food. It's manifested in our Oneness so much so, that we find ultimate fulfillment when exposed to it, lived it. Our Oneness is seen for it, as we were made for it, and desire it. We may deny it, turn our backs on it, try to reason out of it, but will always find a way to express it or it be expressed to us. It coalesces into all man-made philosophical reasonings as we search to find our way through an uncertain life's journey. May it be that we truly come into reality that we are more of One, from "One", than we are different, and that together while time and life last, we can be One as was originally intended.

A Conclusion

Our coming is seen in our Oneness, for none came otherwise, as many would like to think, it is self-evident, even common to all, who have ever taken their first breath, opened their eyes in innocence, placed near a life sustaining fountain for their first suck. We will exit this space of life where we first had no choice in the matter, regardless of the path taken, whether it be voluntarily or involuntarily. For our Oneness in how we became, our coming, and our becoming shows the necessity of character building, as living and exiting will be highlighted in this truth, that we are all really One, a brother, a sister, a neighbor.

Contributor: Merlene Peters.....Footnote1

Blog:www.poetrylosophy.com